ARTIST HOPE SANDROW TO INAUGURATE PLATFORM AT PARRISH ART MUSEUM

New Series Offers Three-Month Residencies to Artists For Development of Site-Specific Projects

WATER MILL, NY 10/25/2012 — Conceptual Artist Hope Sandrow inaugurates the Parrish Art Museum's Platform program, an experimental series of artist-driven projects, with Genius Loci (the prevailing spirit of place). Comprised of multidisciplinary components, from performances and temporary installations to participatory events and screenings, Genius Loci will inhabit the Museum from Sunday, November 4 through January 2013. Also on view amongst the Museum's new acquisitions, are two of Sandrow's photographs.

Organized by Curator of Special Projects Andrea Grover, Platform involves ongoing projects that consider the entire Museum as a potential canvas for works that transcend disciplinary boundaries. According to Grover, "Every three months a new artist or collective will be invited to respond to and activate the myriad spaces and grounds of the Museum, from the corridors to the café to the covered porches and terraces, encouraging new ways to experience art, architecture, and the landscape."

For Genius Loci, Hope Sandrow has created temporary projects and performances that integrate art and cultural objects used in rituals and ceremonies that mark a beginning or rite of passage - marking the opening of the new Parrish Museum site. Sandrow, whose practice often involves intensive historical research into site and place, presents works that evoke symbols of the past, new life, and good fortune, corresponding to the many cultures that have enlivened the history of the East End.

One component of Genius Loci is (Sky)gaze, which refers to the ancient practice of seeking information about one's environment (such as timekeeping and navigation) by observing the sky. (Sky)gaze will include screenings of Sandrow's video, created at Mecox Inlet to the Atlantic Ocean in Water Mill, Untitled

Observations, guided telescope viewing by astronomers Sean Tvelia and Dr. Mike Inglis on the Museum's Southwest Terrace, and photo portraits by Hope Sandrow, also on the Southwest Terrace. Genius Loci will also feature performances by artists Sur Rodney (Sur), Elke Luyten and Kira Alker; a lobby installation of a nineteenth-century display case once owned by Samuel Parrish containing objects that symbolize the origins of the Parrish as well as the Town; and a collage of audio clips representing the evolution and diversity of flora, fauna and human life associated with the Museum's new site at 279 Montauk Highway in Water Mill.

Hope Sandrow's practice is one of total engagement with her surroundings. For example, her Open Air Studio is an evolving work of art that encompasses the breadth of her Shinnecock Hills backyard, its past and present, and all living things within. At the same time she connects the microcosmic to the universal through themes of natural history, art, culture, and science. Sandrow has exhibited at MoMA PS1, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the New Museum, the Corcoran Gallery of Art, and the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden. Her work is in the collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Whitney, and The Museum of Modern Art, Corcoran Gallery of Art among others, and she has received two National Endowment for the Arts Fellowships, a Skowhegan Governors' Award, and an Art Matters Fellowship.

A schedule of Platform events is attached to this release, as well as available online at parrishart.org and at the reception desk of the Museum.

Platform is made possible, in part, by Henry Buhl.

Special thanks to Platform programming partners: Dark Sky Society and Susan Harder, Suffolk Community College, and Montauk Observatory.
